The image displays a 4x4 grid of 16 panels, each showing a document page. The pages are heavily degraded, with significant noise and low contrast, making the text and graphics nearly impossible to read. The layout of the pages suggests they might be forms or reports, with some panels showing what appears to be a header section and others showing a table or list of items. The overall appearance is that of a poor-quality photocopy or a scan of a very old, faded document.

A black and white photograph of a document page. The page features a grid of small, illegible text or markings, possibly a table or a list. The text is too small and blurry to be read. The grid is organized into several columns and rows. There are some larger, more distinct markings at the top of the page, which appear to be headers or titles. The overall image is grainy and has a high level of contrast.

Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine if there were differences in the prevalence of musculoskeletal disorders between two groups of nurses working in different departments of a hospital. The sample consisted of 100 nurses from the intensive care unit and 100 nurses from the medical-surgical department. Data were collected by means of a self-administered questionnaire. Results showed that the prevalence of musculoskeletal disorders was higher among nurses from the intensive care unit than among nurses from the medical-surgical department. This finding suggests that the prevalence of musculoskeletal disorders may be related to the type of work performed.
